“ Hello,

My name is Prince Worthington. Doris Williamson was my mother.

My favorite memory of my Mother was when I was nine years old. My father had died recently, probably just two months prior. My mother knew how much that had traumatized me and decided to set aside a special day for just me and her.

She took me to the movies to see Jim Henson's Labyrinth. I remember her wearing this beautiful Mexican inspired turquoise dress with flashing mirrors on the chest. She had just had her hair cut short and dyed red. She was so pretty. That entire day she took me to a fancy movie theater, brought me popcorn, and just let me be a little kid.

To this day Labyrinth is still my favorite movie because when I watch it I think about our special day.

My mother was the epitome of: warmth, kindness, compassion, resilience, strength, and love. Our relationship was extremely close and I loved her so absolutely.

My mom had been ill for several years upon her passing, but I still miss her so much.

She wasn't just my mother. She was my BEST friend.

I miss you Doris Faye Williamson.

I am so happy to have had you as my mother.

I love.

Prince.

“ My name is Prince Worthington. My name was Todd when I was little (I went through a legal name change years ago).

Doris Williamson was my mother and I loved her very much.

She was not only my mother but my: best friend, confidante, rock, and my hero. Everything I am today I owe to her.

My favorite memories come from my childhood. She always threw the best birthday parties, holiday festivities, and made sure that my childhood was as close to perfect as she could make it.

She taught me that kindness was not merely a virtue but a mandate. My mother was the most thoughtful and generous person you would ever want to know.

My mom loved being a mother and she loved all of her children. She was my favorite person and I miss her terribly.

I am so eternally grateful that Doris was my Mother. And I will always try and be her good son, not just for her but myself as well.

I love you Mama.

Rest In Peace.
